

Kingston Firemen Going to Troy On Special Train

Friends of Firemen Will Also Find Accommodations on This Train—Cornell and Union Hose Going in Busses—Biggest Parade in History of Troy.

The parade in Troy in connection with the annual convention of the Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Convention will be the biggest parade ever held in Troy by any organization. The local committee at Troy in charge of the convention reported to-day that the parade would be at least three miles long and would not only be the biggest firemen's parade but exceed any parade ever held there. So far 75 companies have accepted the invitation to participate in the parade. There will be 34 bands and 50 drum corps.

In addition to the program as published there will be fireworks every night of the convention from June 13 to June 20 inclusive. President William B. Martin of this city will preside at the convention. There will be general business at the opening session on June 18. Election of officers will be held on June 19 and the parade will be Thursday, June 20.

Arrangements have been made for the men of the firemen's home to be in the reviewing stand in front of the city hall and during the wait for the parade there will be concerts by Doring's Troy City Band.

Kingston May Lead Parade
Kingston will probably lead the parade with its seven companies. This is the largest number of companies to participate in the parade from any one city. All of the Kingston companies will be in one division and it is expected that this division will be the first, heading the parade in honor of President Martin.

The Kingston firemen will run a special train over the west shore railroad leaving Kingston at 8 o'clock daylight saving time, June 20, the day of the parade. Friends of the firemen will find accommodations on this train which will also take Centrals, Weiners, Rapids, Cordis and Excelsiors. On the train will also be the Citizens' Band, Mechanics' Band, Excelsior Hose Company Band and Excelsior Hose Company Drum Corps. In view of the number of friends of the firemen who will avail themselves of the low fare rate on the special train the train will consist of from 12 to 15 coaches.

Cornell and Union Hose Companies had made arrangements to go to Troy by bus prior to the securing of the special train and those two companies will travel in busses.

All of the companies going by train will leave their engine houses at 7 o'clock on the day of the parade and make a parade to the station. On the return of the train at about 10 o'clock that night another parade will be made. The special train will leave Troy at 8 o'clock in the evening.

It is expected the same route will be followed as at present with the elimination of a number of curves which are in the present alignment.

Three Lutheran Synods to Merge

New Synod Will Be Called United Lutheran Synod of New York and Consists of 50,000 Members—Expect Merging of Congregations.

The delegates of two local Lutheran congregations, Trinity and Redeemer, have returned from Albany where they attended one of the most momentous gatherings in the history of the Lutheran Church in New York state. They were the Rev. W. Pretzsch, the Rev. O. E. Brandorff and William F. Miller.

For a number of years several synods had been operating upon the same territory. They were the New York Ministerium, organized 1786; the New York Synod and the Synod of New York and New England. They had been kept apart because of language and other differences, but which now no longer constituted an obstacle to union.

After several years of conference to remove various obstacles the merger of these three synods was finally consummated Wednesday. The president of the New York and New England Synod was elected president; the Rev. Paul Kirsh of Buffalo, of the New York Ministerium, was elected secretary, while Fred Weter of the New York Synod was elected treasurer.

The new synod will be called the United Lutheran Synod of New York and consists of 50,000 members. Through the merger of these three bodies greater efficiency and economy is assured. Trinity Lutheran and Redeemer will be members of this new synod. The synod will meet in Rochester next year. It is expected that the merging of the synods will encourage the merging of congregations in various cities.

Seek Fugitive And Get Still

Troopers Discover 500 Gallon Still on Farm Near Ellenville—Morris Rand Arrested—Immature Captured by Farmer.

While looking for an escaped inmate from the Napanoch Institution for Defective Delinquents, State Troopers discovered a 500 gallon still Saturday on an apparently abandoned farm at Oak Ridge, near Ellenville. Sergeant Hopkins and Trooper Reilly while searching in the vicinity for the man came on the farm house which was supposed to be vacant. As they approached four men fled but Morris Rand was captured and turned over to the federal authorities. Sergeant Hopkins communicated with the prohibition office in this city and federal agents took charge of the still and some 500 gallons of alleged alcohol. A considerable quantity of mash was also found on the premises.

Warren Rapp, for whom the Troopers were searching when they came on the still, was apprehended by a farmer near Ellenville and taken back to the institution by Chief of Police Hal Ross.

Hand Held in $2,500 Bail.

Four men disappeared in the woods but Rand returned later and was placed under arrest charged with manufacturing. A quantity of alcohol was seized, also mash, Rand was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Connelly Monday and held in $2,500 bail for examination on June 25. Rand was arrested and convicted in 1925 under a transportation charge.

A Chevrolet truck was also seized. About 10 o'clock that night while the agents were in the vicinity on the liquor case the prisoner who escaped from Napanoch was located in a swamp and the agents cooperated with the Troopers and Chief of Police Ross in the attempted capture. However the prisoner made his way out of the swamp and disappeared. Several shots fired failed to halt the man.

Fliers Are Again Forced to Return

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 11 (AP).—Captain Albin Ahrenberg in his seaplane, the Sverige, returned here at 9:25 a. m. (5:25 a. m. E. S. T.), after taking off at 6:35 a. m. (2:35 a. m. E. S. T.) for Iqviut, Greenland, in continuation of his flight from Stockholm to New York.

It was the second time this morning that the fliers had got into the air successfully and had to return. The heavy fuel load had forced them back shortly after 4 o'clock.

Captain Ahrenberg's start this morning was made despite a warning from the meteorological station here that weather conditions in the vicinity of Greenland made his trip not feasible.

Captain Ahrenberg returned to change the propeller on his plane. He is expected to start again within a few hours.

Drive for Votes On Farm Relief As Decision Nears

Three Republican Senators Called to White House for Conference But Their Positions Remain in Doubt—Talk of Compromise Proposal on Debiture Plan.

Washington, June 11 (AP).—An intensive drive for votes was under way today in the Senate as a decision was neared in the controversy over the Debiture Plan in the Farm Relief Bill and on the bill itself. During the morning three Republican Senators, reported in the doubtful column, were called to the White House. It was indicated afterwards that their positions still were in doubt.

Sensors Nye and Frazier of North Dakota, who voted for the debenture, were among the White House visitors but they indicated later they had not changed their attitude. Senator Couzens, of Michigan, who has been counted on by the Republican leaders to support the administration, was a breakfast guest of Mr. Hoover.

He made it known yesterday that he was "on the fence" and was seriously considering voting against the conference measure, which recommends elimination of the debenture.

Couzens declined to discuss the White House visit and announced later he wanted to hear the final arguments before making his decision.

Compromise Suggested.

Talk of a compromise proposal, whereby the export debenture would be put in the Farm Relief Bill for a two-year try out was heard during the morning.

Secretary Hyde visited the Capitol for last-minute conferences with leaders.

Poll clerks and party whips were on the telephone throughout the day to ascertain any last minute switches.

The debenture was put into the Farm Bill originally by the Senate by the close vote of 47 to 44 against the solid administration lineup.

Several switches have been rumored.

Sensors Trammell, Democrat, Florida, announced today he could support the conference report. He voted before the debenture. This gave the administration a gain of one sure vote.

Form New Order In Eastern Star

Asbury Park, N. J., June 11 (AP).—E. M. Biron, of Atlantic City, patron of Grace Chapter 106, Order of the Eastern Star, today announced 22 chapters have resolved to withdraw from the organization and form a new order.

Biron said 200 officers, past and present, of 22 chapters of the state met here Sunday in secret session to organize the "all around social club" and order which, like the Eastern Star, would admit only close relatives of master Masons.

The withdrawal, he said, was the result of the adoption three years ago of a ritual requirement "which made the order of Eastern Star strictly Christian instead of non-sectarian."

Ten thousand members in New Jersey who profess the Jewish and other faiths, he added, "can have no other alternative than to withdraw from the order."

The new organization, of which Biron was named temporary president, will be "strictly non-sectarian."

Scout Rally and Field Day At Saugerties July 4

The committee having in charge the Fourth of July celebration at Saugerties has invited the Boy Scouts of the county to participate in a County Scout Rally and Field Day at Saugerties on Thursday, the Fourth of July.

Fourth of July. For several years past on this day Saugerties has provided the entertainment for the scouts of Amsterdam when the scouts have appreciated. This year, the committee has extended the invitation to all Boy Scouts of the county to enter the parade in the morning and put on a rally and field day program in the afternoon. That Saugerties will give the scouts a real good time goes without saying. Refreshments will be served the scouts at the noon hour and prizes donated to the winners of the contests.

The Ulster County Council, B. S. A., appreciates the invitation. Every troop of the county is expected to be represented to help make the rally a success.

Nine Scouting Events

An outdoor program of events has been arranged to provide spirited contests between the scouts and also furnish entertainment and fun for the spectators. There will be nine scouting events as follows:

Chariot race. Each team consists of five scouts, who take hands. The center scout is the driver. Scout neckerschief has been placed by the driver to suit himself. Team runs fifty yards and the driver picks up neckerschief in his teeth and team returns to starting line intact. Speed contest.

Knot tying contest. Scouts, one from each troop are to tie the nine tenderfoot knots. Accuracy and speed to count.

Antelope race. Eight scouts to team. Team runs in single file with hands hold of belt of scout in front. At signal, team runs 50 yards and makes left turn and returns to starting line. Falling, breaking apart or taking hands off of scout in front disqualifies team. Speed contest.

Water Bowling Contest—Team will be furnished two well-seasoned pieces of wood, a one quart pail, water, two matches. A teaspoonful of soap chips is added to the water. Scouts use only wood provided. They make fire and boil the water until the water boils over the rim of pail. Speed contest.

Samphour Signaling Race—Messages of not more than 100 letters to be sent by Scouts of each team. Speed and accuracy contest.

Fire by Friction Contest—Drill, fire-board and tinder to be of native material of Ulster county. Speed contest.

Wig Wag Signaling Contest—Messages of not more than 50 letters to be sent by contestants. Accuracy and speed contest.

Fire by Flint and Steel—Contestants to produce fire by use of flint and steel. Bark and small amount of charred rags allowed. Speed contest.

Dressing Race—Official Scout uniform only permitted. Team runs ten yards and removes hats, placing them on the ground. Then runs ten yards more for each article of clothing removed. When distance marker has been circled, team returns, replacing clothing in regular order as reached. Shirts must be buttoned completely, with shoes completely laced at start and finish. One button left undone or lacing skipped, belt upside down, shirt not properly tucked in, or any error in not being completely dressed may disqualify the team. Accuracy and speed count.

These events will provide plenty of entertainment and fun for spectators. The public is cordially invited to attend. Many troops are interested in the project and the Scouts are practicing for the contests.

Tagging Major League Bases

(By Herbert W. Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

While the Philadelphia Athletics gallop along seven games in advance of the American League field, three western clubs are providing National League fans with one of the most races in its history.

Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Chicago, which have taken turns in leading the race in John Heydler's circuit, were bunched so closely that a handkerchief could cover them all. The Pirates of Pittsburgh held the lead by a two-point margin over the St. Louis Cardinals, with Chicago Cubs only a half game to the rear of the pace setters.

This condition of affairs can be accounted for by the fact that the Pirates picked yesterday to lose their second game in a row to the Brooklyn Robins, 7 to 6, while St. Louis and Chicago both were recording victories.

Chick Hafey's double, triple and fifth homer of the season helped the Cardinals subdue the voracious Phillies, 19 to 9.

Another free-hitting game at Chicago went to the Cubs by 16 to 5 over the Boston Braves.

John McGraw's New York Giants lost some more valuable ground at Cincinnati where they bowed to the Reds, 7 to 3.

Behind the usual good pitching of Lefty Grove, the Philadelphia Athletics maintained their lead intact in the American League scramble by downing Chicago 3 to 1.

Waite Hoyt slightly outpitched Alvin Crowder at New York and the Yankees tossed out St. Louis, 3 to 2.

Detroit managed to beat the Boston Red Sox, 1 to 0, but it took Charley Ruffing's wildness to give the Tigers their score.

A bad first inning cost the Washington Senators their game with Cleveland, 4 to 3.

Maneached Man Cells

for World's Sympathy

I often think of the last case of Kuma. He was the ruler of a great country, with royal blood in his veins, and the owner of possibly the world's greatest collection of crowns, jewels, vestments and the like. His subjects pretended to love him, and reverently called him the Little Father. At a dinner from him, great hordes of men sprang to arms.

Yet one night some man took him into a dirty cellar and beat him to death, together with his wife and children. I didn't know it for years, but I was always better off than the czar. His main trouble was dreadfully commonplace; he was bespeckled. So far as I am able to make out from the records, his wife was one of those good women who, without the slightest evidence, believe in signs, omens, dreams, and the truth sticking. The rule is to laugh at a bespeckled man. We should, instead, go to his rescue. I know bespeckled men who are being as cruelly wronged as a man seized by bandits.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Airplane Plays Poor

Second to the Birds

A group of French scientists have proved to their own complete satisfaction that wonderful as airplanes may be, they still come a long second to bird flights. A single swallow in three times as swift and economical a flyer as the very best pursuit plane in the French army. Three scientists, Huguenard, Migon and Salme-Lague, have used a new "machine gun" motion picture camera with a double objective to evolve a method for testing the "fineness" on real air planes in actual flight and on birds in the air.

The camera gives simultaneously on the same strip of film clear images of a guiding mark on the ground and six feet from the lens and of an airplane flying away, as well as a clear image of a man placed 150 feet away. Using it, the scientists discovered that a good pursuit plane gave a "fineness" inferior to 6. The "fineness" of a swallow was found to be at least 19.

Use Common Sense

In the nature of things all ordinary stunts and feats of strength are at the same time wonderful exercises for those physical culturists who are advanced enough to be able to do them. You can combine the spectacular with the practical. The human system, no matter how robust, was never intended to handle packages weighing a couple of tons. Why not leave that to the elephants? Indeed, intended record-breaking lifts of any kind, with barbells or other weights, are not to be regarded as exercise in the proper sense, and should only be undertaken by highly developed professionals in this field—or by amateurs who have attained professional standing by way of accomplishment.—Carl Easton Williams in Physical Culture Magazine.

Sharing Happiness

The souvenir postcard with the scrawled line "Wish you were here," has been laughed at and ridiculed but just the same it is an echo from the human heart.—American Magazine.

Three-Minute Egg

A Detroit woman who got in a long distance telephone call wanted to talk only three minutes. She decided to time herself with a contrivance used for timing eggs being boiled. The device is fashioned on the principle of the hourglass and by setting it near the telephone where she could see it, she felt she was able to get the full benefit of her conversation over the telephone without any danger of talking longer than she desired.—Detroit News.

The Way It Goes

"That bird is so noisy that no matter when he gets downtown he always arrives at a parking place just as some other fellow is pulling out and he can back right in."

"And I am so unlucky that if I turned into a street hunting one, I'd get there just in time enough to see a dozen machines backing into open spaces that hadn't been occupied for at least half an hour."

Danger From Marchers

The director of the Engineering societies theory says that soldiers marching in step across a bridge might cause failure of the bridge due to too great a load or due to vibration. If the type is known, together with certain other details of its construction, it is possible for a bridge engineer to calculate whether or not the bridge will break. It is sometimes possible to provide oscillations in a bridge by men marching in step, and these oscillations may be sufficient cause to break down the bridge. In 1831 a suspension bridge at Angers, France, gave way when 157 soldiers were marching over it and 225 were killed.

Holland's Independence

An error often made is to attribute Dutch success in the war for independence to the arms of William and to Dutch bravery and endurance. With these were inestimable factors in the defeat of Spain. But William drove 25 years before Dutch independence was recognized. Maurice of Orange and subsequent monarchs were given time due for their work after the deed.

Not least Spanish technology and poverty be forgotten. A Spanish captain once said: "If death had to come from Spain we would be sure of a long life," and twice things had to be repaid, the national debt—New York Herald Tribune.

The dog show, it is said, was a growing success.

Germany is manufacturing a secret tank that it sends through steel like a hot knife through butter, and is sending 50,000 worth of it daily at $144 the piece. Germany may not be able to pay but she knows how to produce.

At a New York banquet the vocalists of those present were placed at $2,000 each. It is said that some of the wealthier donors paid the bill for the banquet on which half made a few notes.

The New York theater would be a thing of the past if Mayor Jimmy Walker's first step in from time to time the collection of wealth and other things in an improper manner to enter it up.

Of course there is further development to be made in the generally of military and naval science in a recent talking machine all seemed to come up of the corner player's dirty hat.

WANTED TO BE DRY CAR.

Mrs. Willebrandt's willingness to give up her fame-bringing official position, even for a larger salary, caused surprise, and it was suspected that she was not pleased with the way things were going in Washington. Now, according to the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, it is definitely known that she not only expected to remain in office but confidently aspired to become "generalissimo" of all national prohibition enforcement when the prohibition bureau was transferred to the Department of Justice, where in she was Assistant Attorney General. "Mrs. Willebrandt," we read, "the dry organizations, and the churches had every reason to expect that the Hoover administration would accede to this plan. Had not the dries and the churches put Mr. Hoover in the White House with the most impressive outpouring of the American electorate in history? Had not Mrs. Willebrandt in her campaign speeches last fall rallied the Protestant churches to war on Mr. Hoover's Catholic opponent? Were there not to be the customary rewards for such services?"

But, according to the Tribune's story, this scheme was blocked by Attorney-General Mitchell who, though dry enough, was "unilaterally opposed" to Mrs. Willebrandt's elevation to "supreme control of the consolidated prohibition enforcement machinery." Eventually she was given to understand that she could not have her wish and "to her astonishment" she learned that this was "the decree of Mr. Hoover himself." It is understood that some of her methods, including the spy system, had not been approved. This is given as the explanation of why "the frebrand of prohibition" resigned at the first convenient opportunity, and why the Administration "accepted her resignation with an alacrity that amused official Washington," official praise being "gladly bestowed on her in return for a consummation so devoutly wished for."

A DIRT FARMER STILL.

It seems that the Canadian "dirt farmer," Frederick Percival, who recently succeeded to the Earldom of Egmont, has been in no way changed by the unexpected turn of fortune's wheel. A "dirt farmer" still, he is turning 500-year-old lawns at Avon Castle into plowed fields in order to make them "pay their way." Contrary to expectation—for youth is more adaptable—his young son, Viscount Percival, remains a chip of the old block. "That's what I call plantin' land, dad," the Viscount is quoted as saying as he watched the plow turn up rich loam which had been watered and cared for for five centuries merely for pleasure's and beauty's sake. "Sure, son; sure is," responded the Earl, who still wore his old ready-made suit purchased near his Canadian farm.

The news comes that the title of this unconventional Earl of Egmont is now questioned. The dirt farmer succeeded his distant cousin, the ninth Earl, but a baker born in Australia claims that his father was a son of the sixth Earl and that this should give him the inheritance. "Well, if it's his'n, it's his'n," the dirt farmer Earl is quoted, and the young Viscount is equally indifferent. They seem to be ready to go back to their Canadian farm without regret and perhaps even with relief. But would the horny-handed baker prove to be any more adaptable? The English law of succession has been responsible for curious results, but perhaps for none more interesting than this one to the amused observer of the human comedy.

MOTOR BUS ACCIDENTS.

Bus accidents are becoming a common highway peril. With the summer traffic peak not yet reached, there have already been more bus accidents than usual, with a growing list of injured and killed. In a good many instances the accident has occurred when the bus driver has tried to take his bulky car around a car ahead of him. If he doesn't pass some of the traffic in his way he can't maintain his schedule. Perhaps the solution would be to have all vehicles for impeded traffic. If they did that, however, how could the buses complete successfully with trains, interurban trolley lines and private motor cars?

The new solution, says one newspaper writer, is to build highways wide enough to accommodate all the traffic, with high speed routes in the middle and channels for slow-moving traffic on the sides.

Even while admitting that this solution is sound, the reader smiles grimly at the thought of slow-moving traffic keeping to its channel, except where there are alert and efficient highway police to enforce regulations, there is little respect for traffic laws. The slow drivers have a splendid predilection for getting out of their own lane and into the speed lane, or for straddling the line and interfering with traffic on both sides of it. Something must be done to stop this abuse. These stubborn road hogs probably cause more accidents than do the speedy drivers who are careful of regulations.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By
 JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

THE IDEAL VACATION.

If some one should tell you that you had to do without your food or your sleep for a period of three days you'd think that he was a "mental" case, and yet if you try to do without a vacation once or twice a year you are doing the same to that body of yours as if you did without food or sleep. Why?

Because everybody needs a change of routine at times. And every member of the household needs this change.

The youngsters get away from the routine of school and homework, and parents need this same change if they are to keep themselves young and interested in life.

You will remember the quotation of last year, "Recreation is intended for the mind as whetting or sharpening is to the scythe."

If you spend all your time in recreation or sharpening no work will be done.

If you spend all your time working or mowing your work will not be as good, as "clean cut" as it would be if you stopped to recreate, to sharpen.

The other suggestions for a successful vacation were: To do what you would like to do for two or three weeks.

To rest the first two days of your vacation.

To plan about packing, accommodation, railway or boat tickets, so far ahead and there is no exhausting rush at the last minute which tires you out mentally and physically just when you are ready to enjoy yourself.

Now the ideal time to take a vacation is before you are too tired. As mentioned before "an hour of sleep before midnight is worth two after midnight."

Is this true? Yes, because when you stop work, have an evening of reading, or attend a meeting of any kind, and get off to bed when you are not exhausted, but just nicely tired, you will need about twenty or thirty percent less sleep than if you continue to work or stay up until you are completely exhausted.

GOLD BULLETS

by Charles G. Booth

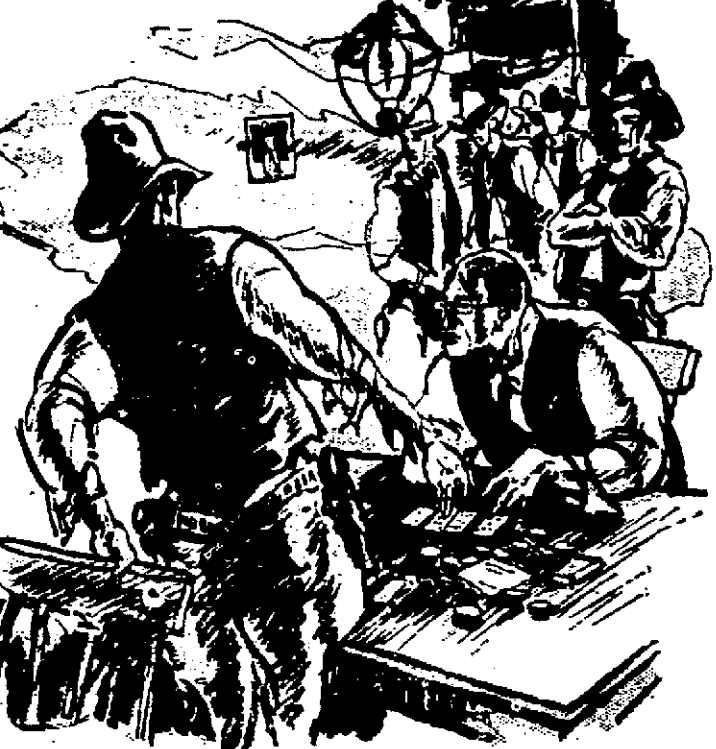

SYNOPSIS: Lundy, a young man, is a gambler and a thief. He is a member of a gang of thieves and gamblers. He is a member of a gang of thieves and gamblers. He is a member of a gang of thieves and gamblers.

A HUMAN LIFE AT STAKE

THE drama of the world when man held us in momentous attention. Jerry, visibly affected, continued in a husky tone.

"Lundy sat with his shoulders hunched up and his hands held close to his eyes. His eyes leaped from his own hand to the back of dad's; his lips twitched, grinning, and he moistened them with the tip of his tongue. The man behind dad seemed to have stopped breathing, so dead still was the room, yet dad said the air quivered like a harp string. Somebody behind him whispered: 'Bet, yuh fool!'"

"It seemed to ease the tension for a moment and Richey said forward a stack of blues. Dad mean-

Lundy spread his hand slowly—a card at a time—a straight flush! used it with a couple more. MacCoy scratched his chin, thinking, then he matched the three blue stacks with another three. It was now Lundy's bet. His hunched-up shoulders almost paralleled the sides of his head and he blinked owlishly at dad, who was trying to fathom his expression. Lundy muttered something to himself, then he suddenly raised MacCoy a stack of blues.

"Richey skinned his cards, hestitated, made a rapid calculation, and measured Lundy's four stacks with five. Dad saw the bet and raised it two stacks of blues. MacCoy dropped out.

"Lundy blinked at dad, peered at his cards, goggled at dad again, then shoved forward every chip, blue, red, and white he had left. Richey measured Lundy's bet stack for stack, and raised it by another. The bet was dad's again.

"He knew instinctively that this was to be the final hand and for the first time since he had picked up the fourth queen he felt afraid. He wouldn't have minded if only the half million or so he was worth were at stake—but this was different. Jerry—his own flesh and blood—waiting with a noose hanging over his head—the living stake—it was ghastly. But what else could he do? This was the only way and he had taken it. His head was buzzing like a mill saw. The room stank of those desert rats at the door! He got himself in hand again. Sit tight! That was it.

"Dad then pushed forward all his chips, topping Richey's bet by some $4,000.

"Lundy's eyes were like points of frozen light, dad said. He grabbed a writing pad off the desk and scribbled an IOU for $10,000. Richey reached for the pad. Then he stopped. 'No,' he muttered, 'I'm out.'

"Lundy looked at dad. Everybody looked at him. Dad thought he caught a gleam of mockery in Lundy's eyes. Dad said he'd have given $100 for a drink of cold water. Lundy was sliding the pad to and fro on the table, blinking at dad like some beastly prowling thing. All at once, dad seized the pad, wrote an IOU for $20,000 and shoved it on top of the others.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

New York—Take it from the advertisements, the smart younger set is deserting "the Primrose path to Southampton" and heading west to ranches that go in for dude wrangling. There's a great display in stores of ten gallon hats, high-laced boots and such things.

Sandwich, England—If you are having trouble with your putting, you might try lying on your back with heels together and toes apart and sighting the line through the opening. At least it worked well in the British amateur tournament for Lawrence Beesley, enabling him to get down tough ones on the 18th and 19th to win a match.

New York—Alfred E. Smith is dictating 5,000 words and up daily of "Up To Now," a title selected for his book in preference to such proposals as "Let's Look at the Record" and "The Name is Smith." Some of the papers say he will receive $1 a word or $100,000.

Washington—The world is stepping on the gas. The number of automobiles registered on January 1 last was 32,028,584, of which 27,007,965 were passenger cars. The United States led with 24,629,921. Spitzbergen had 1 (one).

New York—Old Soak seems to have reformed. Soon after Secretary Stimson's parrot left Manila for Washington there came accounts of his vigorous vocabulary. When his ship docked Sunday ears awaited his best. It was "pretty polly."

Quebec—Mlle. Bernadette Charvett, at home listening to the radio, heard that a body found in the St. Lawrence river had been identified as hers. She went to the morgue to set officials right. They were astonished at the resemblance.

Paducah, Ky.—Five minutes before she died Mrs. Mary Jane Watson, who relatives said was 101 years old, smoked a cigar.

Hingham, Mass.—Years back John Stodard, 84, was warned by his physician to discontinue riding a bicycle. The warning was disregarded. Now John is dangerously hurt. The same physician's automobile struck him when he was wheel.

Briancon, France—A government survey has found that 1,500 persons a year, on the average, are losing real estate in the Hautes Alpes through landslides. One reason assigned is the great number of trees cut down during the war.

New York—Goodbye, folies. Florenz Ziegfeld announces he is through with revues because the public doesn't want them any more.

Washington reports a "South American bush dog" that makes a noise like a robin but never barks. City dog fanciers might be encouraged to introduce the strain.

If eight hundred and eighty-eight million "hot dogs" were eaten in the United States last year, how many quarts of ice cream did it take to satisfy the American public?

Last year's expenditures for radio equipment are said to have amounted to $650,000,000,000, showing how true it is that the luxury of yesterday becomes the necessity of today.

The bureau of engraving has collected a stock of 16,500,000 of the new smaller sized bills. So far as the average man is concerned they might as well stop printing right now.

The United States is acquiring 30,000 miles of new surfaced road each year. In a hundred years that will amount to 3,000,000 miles—but, of course, a lot of it won't be new by then.

The statement that crime costs the people of the United States $6,000,000 a year is all the more provoking when it is considered that it cannot be proved that anybody makes anything out of it.

Liquor Conditions In Canada and United States

This article is the ninth of a series, which does not, therefore, attract attention.

BY MRS. SINCLAIR LEWIS
(Formerly Dorothy Thompson)
Copyright, 1929, by N. Y. Evening Post, Inc.

And when all the booze which comes to the States from Canada—the 1,000,000 odd gallons per year cleared for shipment by boat, the stuff carried by fleets of trucks and automobiles, the train loads engineered by the boldest smugglers, the little caches sneaked in by the reckless amateur—when it is all counted up, it is in comparison with the total amount of liquor brought into the United States, but a whisper in the wind.

Canada, with its hundreds of liquor commission depots, its distilleries and breweries, is not the source of most of our imported supply. The ship I'm Alone, with a Canadian captain, registered from a Canadian port (and before that from somewhere else), did not carry a drop of Canadian liquor. She carried a cargo from the greatest of North Atlantic sources: the Miquelon Islands.

Not Canada but France is the greatest source of the Eastern United States summer supply of alcoholic beverages. And, incidentally, France is the source of the Canadian moonshiners' supply of case goods and grain alcohol for making "hand-brand" to compete with liquor commission wares.

Tiny Islands Are Base.
Grand and Petite Miquelon, two tiny islands off the coast of Nova Scotia, the last territories which France holds in the new world, were before American prohibition the center of French codfisheries. Every year during the codfish season many scores of French fishermen came over to these islands and returned when the fishing was done. The normal population of the islands was less than 500; their total territory is only eighty-odd square miles. They are rocky, cragged, with indented coast lines; nothing grows on them, but before prohibition they represented a considerable economic interest to France because of the fisheries. Today they are the most important outposts in the new world of the French wine and brandy industries and fishing has been practically abandoned.

Four big warehouses, capable of housing hundreds of thousands of cases of liquor, have been built and are inadequate for the supply, which is piled on docks. Brandy, champagne and liquors from France, whiskies from England and Ireland, grain alcohol from Germany pour in to these islands, into the principal port and capital, St. Pierre, the moment the ice goes out and navigation is possible.

Liquor Is Cheap.
The great advantage of Miquelon liquor is that it is cheap. There are no such taxes as encumber Canadian spirits. Whisky can be bought at about half of what it costs from Canadian liquor commission stores. So today Miquelon belongs to the rum-runners. About every one on the islands is affected by the business; nearly every one is rich. But the islands remain completely primitive. Rum-runners who leave their boats have only "Marie's place" in which to stay—a primitive lodging house in which any American who looks as though he might be a government agent is likely to be knifed. The rum-runners have the run of the islands, if they keep their hands off Miquelon women. The feminine population is small and their men watch them carefully.

Goods purchased in Miquelon are loaded onto ships, or schooners, taken out into the Atlantic (past the United States Coast Guard's cordon sanitaire, which keeps an eye upon ships that enter and leave, but is powerless to do anything. Incidentally, the governor of the islands has complained bitterly about the presence of so many American cutters), and under orders from New York, transmitted by radio, are re-loaded on other schooners which carry their cargoes to a point just outside of the twelve-mile limit. The dash for the final port is made by the fastest boats of the rum-fleet; often they are high-powered steam yachts, and often they take pains to fly the ensign of well-known yacht clubs.

Profits Very Large.
The profit on Miquelon whisky is very large; a brand of Scotch, case, would cost twice that purchased in Canada and often brings $100 a case or more, even before it has been cut in Long Island distilleries, or elsewhere. Not all of it comes from France. Some of it is Canadian moonshine, sent to St. Pierre to be bootlegged from there.

The rum-running ships usually carry, in addition to the captain and crew, a supercargo who represents the owners and is responsible for everything except actual navigation. The schooner or yacht which comes alongside to take off the booze employs the device used by the I'm Alone—the captain or supercargo identifies himself by producing the other halves of a number of bank notes which the original leader holds.

Schooners are fitted with machine guns and not infrequently carry stores of dynamite. "One can always make a bomb in an emergency," one rum-runner told me. Each member of the crew is armed. Yachts carry powder guns, mounted in the same fashion as the usual signal guns, which use blank cartridges for firing salutes and which are employed to fire lines to the wharf when bad weather makes it difficult for them to dock otherwise. The presence of a powder gun on a fast rum-runner pays the water lines on their ships two feet or so higher than they should be to give the impression that boats are not loaded, when they are.

At night it is the custom to sail in complete darkness—a violation of international sea law. Beaver board is cut into shutters to fit the port-holes; the engine room alone is allowed to burn light, and it is concealed by three shutters. On the binnacle a tiny green light burns on light nights; a blue on dark ones.

"Our greatest trouble is the phosphorescence of the water," one rum-runner told me. "But the rum rings have scientists working on this. We hope to find some way of doing away with an illuminated wake."

Hi-jackers are still a menace, but the rum rings have consolidated their efforts against them. The favorite trick of the hi-jacker is to come alongside a waiting rum ship with girls on board.

"Sometimes we are out at sea for months at a time, waiting for some one to come and take our load," a rum-runner said, "and we'd do anything for an evening with some girls."

Land on Rich Estates.
Once the load is upon the final carrier it is run in, according to instructions, which may be changed from moment to moment by radio. Long Island is a favorite landing place. Booze is landed at dozens of well-known summer resorts; it has been stored for weeks on the estate of an extremely well-known New York citizen who has hundreds of acres fronting the water.

"The family don't know about it—they have a corruptible caretaker," a rum-runner explained.

Rum yachts, as I have said, often travel under the ensign of well-known yacht clubs. There is a yacht club within the city limits of New York where rum-runners regularly rest their ships and undertake repairs.

There are regular rum-runners' hotels; places where the bootleggers are known, treated courteously and have the cooperation of the management. Two large and well known New York hotels are especially favored. One of the larger of the great rum rings maintains a suite in one of these for three rum-runners who have brought their cargoes in. The rooms are at the disposal of any member of the gang; the company pays the bills. Another rendezvous of rum-runners is one of the most fashionable summer hotels on Long Island.

Booze Seized Is Negligible.
A certain rum ring, which owns an ocean-going ship, seven schooners, several yachts, among them one of the finest and fastest boats on the Eastern coast, two sea-planes, thirty-seven trucks and several speed boats operating on the Great Lakes, is reputed to be financed by a well-known bank on Long Island.

The amount of booze which the combined enforcement agencies of the United States apprehends is negligible. The reasons more booze isn't caught are numerous.

In the first place, no single agency is incorruptible. There is never a time when the whole force, everywhere, is honest. At this moment it is very hard to "grease" any one operating on the Detroit river. There were wholesale dismissals there recently; some sixty officials were dismissed, a third of them being held for further inquiry.

All right. We—the big boys—don't operate on the Detroit River for a while. The racket there is rough. Somewhere else, though, it is easy.

Secondly, there is no effective co-operation between all the various agencies charged to enforce the law. Each is jealous of the others. They seldom hitch up.

No Real Co-ordination.

"Why," said one man—and he was not a rum-runner, but an American government official (not engaged in prohibition enforcement) who has had an opportunity to study the rum-running situation at a pivotal point for several years—"Mabel's boys must have collected in Windsor, La Salle, and other points on the Canadian side of the Great Lakes and the Detroit River enough information to fill a skyscraper building in Washington."

"Everything is known about the rum business that can be known. The names of the owners—the names of their ships—the routes they take—the cargoes they carry. The place is full of stool-pigeons. Innumerable reports are filed. But rum-running isn't stopped by filing reports, and there is no real co-ordination of effort."

The rum-runners may say the same thing, gratefully.

Boats Are Poorer.

Third, the rum-chasers are, on the whole, poorer navigators than the rum-runners and have worse boats. The great rings have some of the fastest boats (many of them sub-chasers purchased cheap from the United States government) and some of the cleverest seamen in their service on the whole Atlantic Coast and Great Lakes.

Fourth, the rum-runners, and not the rum-chasers, have the support of that element of the public who are financially and economically powerful. This is the key point in the whole situation. This is the joker in the pack. The rum-runner is protected by his customers and his customers are powerful men. His customers do not report him if he uses the flag of fashionable yacht clubs; his customers will even, if certain seems to demand, store goods for him. His customers can and do finance him—not only by buying his goods but by actually leading him money.

The tenth article of the series by Mrs. Lewis will appear tomorrow.

Too Many Bowlegs;

Judge Rules on 'Em
Lexington, Ky.—The family of Jerry Miller, residing near Irvington, Ky., southwest of here, is the champion bowling family of Kentucky, according to a revelation just made before Judge Hoffman in county court. The family has seven children and scores 100 per cent in bowling.

The father was recently brought before County Judge Hoffman by officials of the hospital bureau and an effort made to force him to have his younger children operated on to straighten their legs. After consideration of the problem Judge Hoffman decided that an operation was not necessary as Mary Miller, aged fourteen, the oldest of the seven, who had bowlegs for several years of her earlier life but has now practically outgrown this imperfection.

New Buildings for Compensation Camp Van Daal Awards Made

Rupert Carr's Work Praised by Hughes Mearns, Author of Camp New Theatre for Boys and Girls.

(By F. G. Clough.)

The announcement has been made that Camp Van Daal, a summer camp for boys and girls between the ages of four and one-half to 14, located at Zena, near Woodstock, will open its summer camp within a few weeks with several new buildings ready for the children. But this announcement isn't the most important thing about Camp Van Daal, which the writer visited just recently.

The interesting thing about Camp Van Daal seems to me to be Rupert Carr, the director. As near as I can make out "Rupe," as he is called by the boys he directs, is a sort of combination of boy, Peter Pan, teacher, and spirit. At least those who have worked or played with him seem to testify that his unusual camp is the direct result of his ideas for child education.

This Camp Van Daal is one of the successful modern things to have grown out of the Woodstock art colony. Hughes Mearns, author of "Creative Youth" and teacher with the Lincoln Schools system, speaks very highly of the results that have been and are being obtained at Camp Van Daal. Other well-known members of creative colonies about the country join Mr. Mearns in praising Rupert Carr's work.

For the present camp season, which begins July 1, there is being erected a large mess hall, kitchen and maid's quarters. The carpenter shop, weaving room, sculpting, painting and printing rooms have been moved into an expansive circle of rustic buildings which skirt a playground and field near the woods. The location of this camp is ideal; woods surround the buildings, and just across an open field there is a creek and swimming hole where the boys and girls are taught to swim. There is a girl's dormitory; there is a sort of assembly hall, though such titles or names are foreign to Camp Van Daal parlance. Rupert Carr is enthusiastic about the new open-air theatre being constructed on a little side hill on the camp property, for here some of the plays yet to be written and acted will be witnessed by the teachers, friends and parents of the fortunate boys and girls who will spend the summer there.

While everything is organized and directed by competent instructors, there is more of play about this outdoor school than work. The healthy and pleasant thing about Camp Van Daal is the countryside, the scenery, the natural advantages for boys and girls.

The personnel includes Mr. Carr, Mrs. Carr, Mrs. Bateman, prominent sculptress, Mr. Lewis, Miss Chaplin and three other counselors. The director limits the number of children who may enroll, feeling that he can better carry out his full program for individual attention to each boy or girl by this method. From all indications, the present summer season will see a full enrollment, a bigger and better camp for the boys and girls who attend.

MILTON

Milton, June 10—Local fruit growers expect a large strawberry crop this season. Several have already picked several crates of strawberries some of which have been sold in Poughkeepsie and Newburgh and some have been sold in this community. It has been reported that none of the Central Hudson steamboats will stop at Milton this year which means that fruit will have to be shipped either by train or trucks.

Monday evening, June 17, the Elverhoj theatre will begin an eight weeks' subscription season with "The Private Secretary," the comedy in which John Barrymore won great success. Many Theatre parties are being planned for the opening week at the new Moorish dining salon and terrace overlooking the Hudson river from the highest point at Elverhoj art colony.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Needlecraft and Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Edgar Clarke, Jr., Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Breaneri of Brooklyn were week-end guests of Mrs. Alice Crowell and daughter, Mrs. Grace Hewitt.

The luncheon given by the Ladies' Needlecraft Society Thursday was largely attended.

Children's Day service was held at the Methodist Church Sunday morning and evening. The Rev. T. A. McCormack, pastor, gave a very interesting talk to the children.

Children's Day services of the Presbyterian Sunday school will be Sunday morning, June 16, at 11 o'clock.

Some of the fruit growers who purchased tomato plants from the south are much alarmed over a disease which is rapidly killing the plants. If the disease spreads it will mean a great loss to the growers. An inspector was in Milton last Friday to determine what the trouble is. A number of local fruit growers who thought that the regular fruit crop would not be as large as usual, set out tomato plants hoping to make up for the loss of other fruits.

The many friends of the Rev. Hugh P. Hobson of Ellenville were saddened by the news of his sudden death on Decoration Day. The Rev. Hobson was a former pastor of All Saints Church in Milton and Christ's Church, Marlborough.

There was a very large exhibit at the home craft exhibit held by the trustees of the S. H. Hallock Free Library Friday afternoon and evening. A remarkable collection of embroideries, both old and new, were on display. The sum of $44.50 was realized from the admission.

A card party of sixteen was given by Miss I. Florence Woolsey at her home on Sands avenue Thursday afternoon. The party also attended the Needlecraft luncheon in the Presbyterian church parlor.

A luncheon was given at the Grange hall Saturday afternoon by the Ladies' Aid Society. There was a large attendance, the speakers were the Rev. S. A. McCormack, the Rev. Joseph Chasey, a former pastor of the Methodist Church, the Rev. J. J. Henry, district superintendent of Newburgh.

Frank C. Wood has been confined to his home with septic sore throat the past week.

Miss Carrie Skidmore sailed on Thursday for Germany where she will visit her sister, Mrs. Stephen Herabfield.

Miss Catherine Briggs of Brooklyn has been visiting friends in town.

Destruction of forests in China has resulted in periodic floods and famines, says the American Tree association. The people are impoverished. Much of the wood they use is shipped to them in the form of logs from the Pacific coast of North America and cut into lumber there by persons working for fifteen cents a day. One of the most important steps adopted in the famine relief program for China is the reforestation of the denuded hillsides.

The question is, was that fourteen-ounce baby, recently born, measured by avoirdupois, apothecary's or Troy weight? The value usually placed on infant offspring by fond parents rather suggests the jeweler's measurement as the most suitable, and then it might seem to increase the kid's poundage.

Pickle patches in season demand from growers of the succulent cucumber a "perfect 36" or a perfect waist line to the cake, to make it marketable. Next they will be asking that the warts be removed by Hring.

The greater elaboration of the spectator type of sports frock can hardly be over emphasized. A Simple Frock For Mother's Girl. 6496. Comfortable and attractive is this little dress. The shoulders are lengthened to form short sleeves. The front of the waist portions are arranged in asymmetric lines, and a closing is effected at the centre of the back. The waist is lengthened by flare skirt portions in front. Printed lawn in red and white was chosen in this instance, with binding or piping, belt and pockets of red organdy. Pongee in a natural shade or in pastel tones is also suggested for this style.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. To make the dress for a 6 year size will require 1 1/2 yards 35 inches wide. For belt and pockets of contrasting material 1/4 yard cut crosswise is required. For binding as illustrated 4 yards of bias binding 1 1/2 inch wide is required.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

IN HOLLYWOOD —

— where lovely skin is essential for success —

9 out of 10 screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap . . .

ESTHER RALSTON, famous Paramount star, in the charming and luxurious bathroom which was built in Hollywood for her.

She says: "In their close-ups, stars are more closely observed than women in any other profession. Their popularity largely depends on the beauty of their skin. Lux Toilet Soap is excellent for keeping the skin delightfully smooth."

Esther Ralston

The next time you see charming DORIS KENYON in a close-up, notice how flawlessly smooth Lux Toilet Soap keeps her skin. She says: "Lux Toilet Soap certainly gives my skin that lovely smoothness we mean by 'studio skin.'"

PATSY RUTH MILLER, whose skin is lovely even under the terrific close-up lights, says: "I am delighted with Lux Toilet Soap—it gives my skin the same petal-like texture fine French soaps used to."

Any girl's popularity depends on lovely skin, say 39 leading directors

THE SOFT, enchanting perfection of lovely skin—how it does captivate people! Hollywood knows this so well.

"Exquisite smooth skin is woman's most compelling charm," says Malcolm St. Clair, famous Paramount director—and sums up what 39 foremost Hollywood directors have found out from their experience with motion pictures.

"The public will not have a screen star whose skin is not flawlessly beautiful," he continues. "Lovely skin appeals to them more than any other charm."

"The cleverest make-up cannot fake beautiful skin under the blazing lights of the close-up. It must be the real thing."

Especially now that the huge new incandescent "sun-spot" lights are used for the close-up is it necessary for a screen star to have perfectly smooth skin.

That is why, of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 442 use Lux Toilet Soap. And all the great film studios have made it the official soap in their dressing rooms.

Hollywood finds that this white fragrant soap keeps the skin at its very loveliest.

3 Leading Men InMaverick Co.

The Maverick Stock Company will start rehearsals on June 24. The company includes three well-known Broadway leading men—Carol Acers, recently seen in "The Earth Between" and "The Sea-Gull"; C. Stafford Dickens, English actor and author, leading man in London in many successes and in this country for Winthrop Ames, the Theatre Guild, and now directing his latest play, "The Morning After" which William A. Brady will produce in Atlantic City June 17. After spending one week with his new play, Mr. Dickens will join the Maverick company for rehearsals. The third leading man is E. J. Hallentine, also one of the managers of the theatre. Mr. Hallentine has played in England under George Bernard Shaw and Granville Barker and in this country with both John and Lionel Barrymore. This season he played in and directed the revival of S. S. Glencaine at the Provincetown Playhouse. These three young leading men will share in the important parts of the production at the Maverick. The Maverick Theatre is not for Woodstock alone, but has been established so that the finest plays of the Broadway stage may be seen by all of Ulster county.

He was an observant little chap. "Pa," he said, "Uncle Joe is going to be married Friday, isn't he?" "Yes, son, Uncle Joe has only three more days to wait." The little boy sighed. "The last three days," he said, "they give them everything to eat they ask for, don't they, pa?"

"Are you sure that was a marriage license you sold me last month?" the recent bridegroom asked the marriage license seller. "Why, of course," was the answer. "Well, I thought there might have been a mistake. I've led a dog's life ever since."

A small boy was told that he must write to his grandmother a letter of sympathy on the death of her husband.

This was the letter, adorned with many blots, that eventually arrived: "Dear Grandmother—What a pity about poor Grandpa! Please send me some stamps. There is a new boy here who squeals if I hit him. With love, from Roger."

It's all right to keep an open mind, but it shouldn't be kept so wide open that nothing will stay in it.

"Well, little man, and what would you like to be when you grow up?" "I would like to be a nice old gentleman like you, with nothing to do but walk about and ask questions."

Fewer marriage ties would be broken if husband and wife were tongue tied.

MINNEWASKA PREPARES FOR GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Minnewaska, June 11.—Preparations for the golden anniversary continue and many former Minnewaskans will return for that date. Cliff House lawn has been prepared for the devotees of putting, paths and trails invite the hiker on every hand. The slowly unfolding laurel buds give promise of lavish beauty in a few days. The rhododendron is unusually splendid this year. The Sabbath services were again in charge of the Rev. Joseph Kelly of Washington. His morning subject was "The Ambitious Brothers," and the evening topic "At the Beautiful Gate," an excellent exposition of the power of the risen Christ. Mrs. Carrie Cossum of Poughkeepsie delighted a large audience with apt selections at the program of readings on Thursday evening. Saturday evening the audience was charmed by the program given by Ernest Newton of New York. He gave among others, The Wind and the Lyre, by James H. Rogers. The Longshore Road, a negro spiritual, and Joyce Kilmer's Trees. Mr. Newton last year won the second prize offered in the national contest sponsored by the Atwater Kent Company.

Market for Fruits And Vegetables

New York, June 11.—The market for fruits and vegetables was active today in a decidedly stronger market. The demand was quite active, particularly on the quality stock. North Carolina snap peas, hampers of green flat peas, contracted at $1.10 for $1.05 and was about $1.05.

During the preceding week New York city snap peas were sold at about 175 cents. Supplies were drawn from the Carolinas, Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Maryland. Supplies of strawberries were in excess of requirements and in consequence the price obtained in many instances was of less importance than the finding of a buyer. The market at the close was very weak. Hudson valley strawberries peddled out within the range of 10-25, principally 15-20 cents a quart. Offerings from New Jersey sold at 15-25 cents, occasionally as high as 30c.

The market on green peas at the close was rather firm. Trading was fairly good, especially on attractive stock. New Jersey was the chief source. Sales on bushel hampers were consummated at mainly $1.25 @ $1.75. In a few instances strictly fancy changed hands at $2. Some poor worked out at $1.

Tomato prices slumped further. The demand was poor and supplies were again liberal. Mississippi consignments comprised the bulk of the receipts, and flat crates of four three-quart baskets of the fancy look wholesaled at $1.10 @ $1.50. The choice jobbed out at 85 cents to $1.10.

About 349 carloads of tomatoes arrived on this market last week. Mississippi contributed 234. The remainder came from Florida, Texas, South Carolina and Georgia.

The moderate supply of home-grown spinach found a prompt outlet at a slight advance. Thirty-two quart crates of fine quality sold at $1.25 @ $1.50.

Receipts of green corn were moderate. The market ruled weaker with trading generally slow. Baskets from Texas brought $1.75 @ $2.50. Crates from Florida ranged from $1.25 @ $2.50.

Lighter arrivals and a more active demand resulted in a firmer market and higher prices on southern new crop potatoes. Most of the wholesale business on No. 1 cobbles was reported at $3.25 @ $3.75 a barrel.

Big Increase Seen in Construction of Better Forest Roads.

National forests of the United States, located in various parts of the country, are becoming increasingly popular as touring grounds for motorists, and each succeeding year sees a greater number of motor vehicles passing through these beautiful preserves.

This is pointed out by Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, who says that with this increase in motor touring in the national forests there is to be noted a corresponding increase in the total of improved roads located within them.

Works on Better Roads.
"Figures forwarded to us from national headquarters of the American Automobile association with which we are affiliated, show that recent work on forest roads has brought the total of improved highways there up to 3,775, while the total of all forest roads is 13,311.

"Each year witnesses a gain in the number of motorists who are attracted by the unsurpassed beauties of our national forests, and each year also witnesses additional miles added to the chain of improved roads which is making these delightful areas available to all motor car owners.

More Vacationists in Parks.
"But statistics alone do not tell the whole story of the rising popularity of the national forests as objectives of countless motor tours. A check-up of our own local touring bureau reveals that we directed more vacationists to the national parks during the last year than in any other similar period.

"The increased mileage of improved roads, of course, has had a markedly stimulating effect, and with the policy of constantly advancing that total of mileage strongly in effect we can look forward to a greater flow of cars to the forests next year."

Splashed Oil Is Due to

Carelessness of Owner

Much that passes for oil leakage around the engine is the result of carelessness in adding oil to the crankcase. Just a little oil, spilled over the outside of the filler pipe, will splatter around the engine and give the appearance of trouble.

Since most filler pipes are located toward the front end of the engine the oil that is spilled is nearer the fan and is more easily picked up and scattered.

In some arrangements any oil that is spilled will run down over the front of the timing gear case and drip on the lower fan pulley. This may cause slippage of the belt and overheating of the engine.

At the high speeds cars now travel oil is apt to be blown back to the rear of the engine, where it may be mistaken for leakage from the oil lead to the pressure gauge on the instrument board.

Value of Oil Filter Is Demonstrated in Tests

That engine wear is directly proportionate to the amount of abrasives in the lubricating oil was demonstrated recently in a series of interesting oil filter tests made by research engineers.

The test showed that there is practically no wear with clean oil, but that with the abrasives the wear increases rapidly.

The oil filter keeps the abrasive content down to an average of .025 per cent. When it is known that the crankcase oil in an average car after 500 miles running will have 10 per cent abrasives, the important work accomplished by the oil filter can readily be appreciated.

After 10,000 miles the oil filter's straining unit becomes filled with foreign matter taken from the oil. When this takes place the filter ceases to function properly and it is important that the motorist have it serviced.

Summer Roundup
Of Children

The summer round-up campaign for children entering school this fall is going on this week and there should be many children examined at the places assigned for such examinations. Several children have been awarded the 100 per cent blue ribbon and a complete list of these children will be announced later.

No. 5 and No. 6 children have not been responding as well as expected but there is still an opportunity to do so at the office of Dr. Hugel and at the board of health offices. Children from the No. 7 and 8 districts may report at the offices of Dr. C. B. Van Gaasbeck, Dr. H. L. Van Norstrand and Dr. Sanford. June 14 Dr. Vol will hold another examination for No. 7 children at the Junior League rooms on Wall street.

Thursday Dr. Meyers will examine children of No. 1 school at the school. Any information in regard to the project may be procured by parents by calling 849-M.

What laughter must ring through the halls of the gods when a citizen balked by a sharper's promise to teach him how to raise dollar bills squawks to the police to help get his money back. The gods have their own way of dealing out justice. Their award never falls more neatly than on the man swindled by a proposal to make money unlawfully, says the San Francisco Chronicle. There is no sympathy for him. He ought not to get his money back. As long as his pluckers confine themselves to that game they are almost morally justified in whatever they can get. Certainly there is no choice between them and their victim. Both belong to jail, but one as much as the other.

A papermaker says the art of letter writing "is fast becoming as obsolete as the use of good English" and he bases his conclusion on the fact that the use of personal note paper has fallen off. Alanson H. Short, ticket agent at the West Shore station at Port Ewen, has purchased a Nash sedan. A meeting of the past grand was held at the home of Mrs. Emil Otto in Kingston today.

Any doubt that may remain in the minds of some old-fashioned people as to the motor car becoming a necessity in this rapid age should be removed by an item of news from Johnson City, N. Y., which says: "Out of fifteen heads of families who applied in one day recently for town aid, asserting they were in destitute circumstances, more than half came in automobiles to the home of the overseer of the poor." Perhaps the dispenser of charity should have supplied automobiles to applicants who were without cars, so that all might be on an equality, says the Kingston City Times. The motor industry's slogan, "a car for every family and two or more for many," presents an embarrassing situation for the dispensers of charity.

Advertising men know a great deal about color psychology. Purple and royal blue lead an air of aristocracy to printed matter. That is why you often find expensive automobiles or high-priced securities presented to prospective buyers in elaborate circulars printed in these colors, and in gold, which is also aristocratic. Red, the advertising men say, is a selling color, says Capper's Weekly. It has a tendency to excite the acquisitive instinct in men and women. Candies in red boxes sell best. Expensive perfumes sell marvelously in purple, gold and blue containers. A very red dress on a beautiful woman will often bring the proposal that was withheld for months when more quiet colors were worn.

MOTOR QUIZ

(How Many Can You Answer?)

Q.—What is the average daily run of a tourist now as compared with ten years ago? What are the contributing factors for this increase?

Ans.—The average daily run of a tourist has increased from 100 miles ten years ago to 234 miles today. Better highways, motor car improvements, more adequate sign-posting, improved motor facilities and the raising of speed limits have helped increase this average.

Q.—What devices save oil and minimize wear on cars?

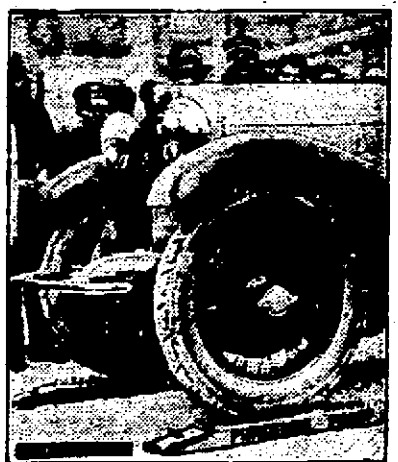

Ans.—The air cleaner eliminates dirt from the intake air; the crankcase ventilator removes water vapor; the oil filter removes sludge and other foreign matter from the oil and the thermostat keeps the engine and oil at the proper temperature. Except in the case of the oil-wetted type of air cleaner, the only unit that requires attention is the oil filter, which should be renewed every 10,000 miles.

Q.—What results when the storage battery fails completely?

Ans.—The engine will be rendered as useless as if the gas tank were empty.

Q.—What care should the battery receive?

Ans.—The battery should be kept at its maximum charge at all times, and never permitted to stand in a discharged state. Fast charging should be avoided. Before unscrewing the filler caps it is a good plan to wash the top of the battery with a solution of ammonia water. The electrolyte level should always be kept above the plates.

New in Engineering
New in Styling
New in Value

America has seen the Viking! And America has approved! Thousands in every section of the country have inspected this new product of General Motors—and have acclaimed it a tremendous advance in automobile value giving.

"A great car," is their verdict. "A most important engineering achievement," they say about its design. "A significant event in automotive history," is their opinion of the introduction of the definite advantages of the ninety-degree V-type eight to the medium-price field.

And this enthusiasm is spreading everywhere, for examination of this new Viking and comparison with other cars reveal an overwhelming number of advantages never before offered to the motoring public.

The new Viking embodies distinctly new and desirable principles of engineering design. It introduces new beauty and tailored smartness—the newest, most impressive creations of Fisher artist-engineers.

The new Viking ninety-degree V-type engine delivers 81 horsepower with exceptional smoothness throughout the entire speed range. Its response to the throttle is remarkable, both in getaway and in acceleration at the higher speeds. It provides greater speed than the average motorist will use and ample power for hills or hard pulling.

The Viking engine introduces an entirely new method of valve arrangement, combining efficiency with quietness, simplicity, and rigidity. The valve mechanism may be easily reached by lifting two cover plates from the top of the V-type engine.

A distinct advancement in fuel distribution results from a new application of the down-draft principle of manifolding. After leaving the carburetor, the fuel vapor flows downward, assisted by gravity, an exactly equal distance to each of the eight cylinders.

The Viking pressure-lubricating system forces oil directly to all main, connecting rod, camshaft, and rocker arm bearings—and through rifle-drilled connecting rods to the piston pins.

Crankcase ventilation prevents oil dilution. And the oil is cleaned by the new Viking precipitating-trap system.

Uniform, efficient cooling of the entire engine is assured by graduated manifold distribution of the water. An engine temperature gauge on the dash and thermostatically-controlled radiator shutters provide further engine protection and efficiency.

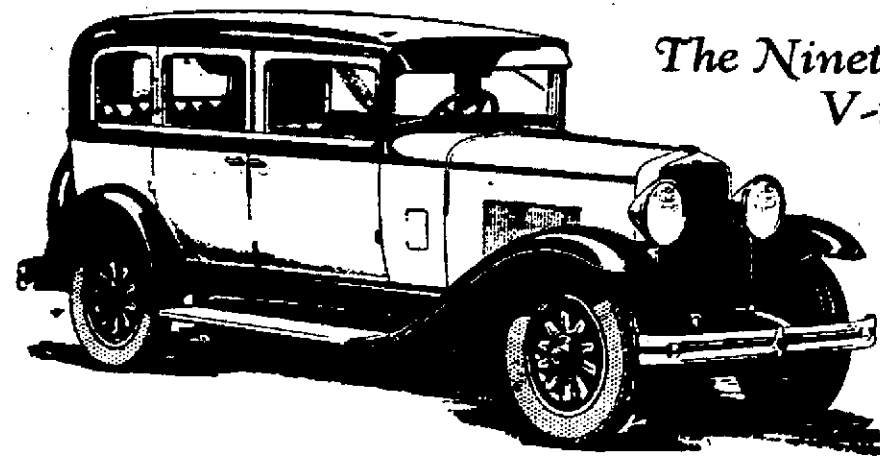

The same precise engineering that distinguishes the Viking ninety-degree V-type eight-cylinder engine is evident in the details of Viking chassis design.

The new Viking is equipped with self-energizing, mechanical, four-wheel brakes of the new two-shoe internal-expanding type. Four Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers, synchronized with the springs, assure restful riding comfort. Fingertip steering and ease of control simplify city driving and parking.

In appearance, the Viking is a trimly-tailored car. Its style has been achieved through graceful proportions, perfection of detail, and simplicity of design. Interiors are roomy, restful, and are furnished in custom-car fashion. In every way, the Viking meets the most exacting requirements of modern motoring.

The Viking is now on display. We invite your close inspection, and comparison with other cars. For, no matter how critically you judge it, you will find the Viking a great car—and an unrivaled value.

VET LOSES HOPE OF VINDICATION

Flying Feet of Captain in World War Is Branded as Lie.

Washington.—The last hope for the official rehabilitation of Edward G. Chamberlain of San Antonio, dishonorably discharged captain of the United States marine corps, was blotted out a short time ago when the Supreme court refused to review the validity of his court-martial. The legal clash to a ten-year fight for reinstatement, which has embroiled the civil and military authorities of the United States and Great Britain and stirred the sympathy of the world.

"I will make no further fight, because there is no place to which I can carry the case," declared Chamberlain. "But I still stick to my story of the events which led to my court-martial and believe the evidence in the case proves that I was not guilty of the charges."

Champions of the former marine captain told that he is one of the most distinguished heroes of the World war—a brave man, who has been crucified by the pettiness and obtuseness of military officials. His wife, the daughter of Gen. Francis Winter, married him when his troubles were darkest, over parental objections, and has fought loyally at his side for eight years. His friends and army associates, convinced of his integrity, have aided him.

Champion Prevaricator. The ten tribunals to which Chamberlain has appealed have upheld the validity of the decision of his first court-martial in London in 1919, which represents the former marine as the champion prevaricator of the A. E. F., a man whose "scandalous conduct" tended to the destruction of good morals.

In July, 1918, Captain Chamberlain was recommended for the Victoria Cross and the Congressional Medal of Honor because of his heroic conduct at the British front. According to the story that flashed in headlines all over the world he was invited to make a flight during a visit with British officer friends at the Touquin air field while on furlough. He encountered twelve German planes and brought down four of them. His plane, riddled by bullets, was forced down between lines. While making his way back to Touquin he rescued a wounded French soldier and brought in a captured German.

Chamberlain did not report the story of his exploits to the authorities; he described the events to a few friends and seemed to wish the matter to go no farther. In the meantime reports of his flight, supposed to have been written by four officers at Touquin, were forwarded to Chamberlain's superior officer, who sent them to headquarters. The marine was the hero of the hour. He modestly deprecated his prowess, deploring the wide publicity, and stressed the unofficial nature of the flight. He refused to give the name of the commander of the unit because the officer would have been liable to court-martial for perjury on an official flight.

Charges Preferred. In March, 1919, nine months later, charges were preferred against Chamberlain before a court-martial which opened at the American navy headquarters in London. The British authorities declared that his heroism was a myth; that he had forged the reports of his exploits and had never been at Touquin at all.

Gen. John M. Salmond, field commander of the British air force, said he could not get any information regarding the British aviators with whom Chamberlain said he had flown. Officers who had been stationed at Touquin said they had not seen Chamberlain there.

The forged charges fell down. Experts on handwriting agreed that Chamberlain could not have written the reports of his heroism. Because of misspelled words and signatures that could not be identified the documents were held to have been forged by somebody.

Mrs. Bridoux, keeper of a hotel near the Touquin aviation field, remembered that Chamberlain had been there. She told how the officers had discussed his flight with great excitement. When he did not return they were worried for his safety. The next day she heard them say that he had returned, she testified. Major Bell admitted that part of a damaged British plane had been found near where Chamberlain said he landed. George Bonitz, daughter of the mayor of St. Jemmes, said she had seen a riddled plane flown by an American. Her testimony tallied with Chamberlain's.

Decision Appealed. The court-martial declared that Chamberlain had knowingly failed to advise his commanding officers that the reports were false. The forged charges were dropped. It was admitted that Chamberlain was a skilled flyer and capable of performing such exploits. He was found guilty, nevertheless, of "scandalous conduct tending to the destruction of good morals and the promotion of falsehood."

The decision was appealed, but the United States naval authorities upheld it. Secretary of the Navy Wilson upheld it; so did President Wilson. Next the case was put before the senate and a special investigating committee was appointed. After four years a report unfavorable to Chamberlain was turned in.

Finally he sought to challenge the proceedings in the Court of Claims. His case was dismissed on the ground that it had not been brought within the time allowed by law. Then when the Supreme court refused to review his case, his last legal avenue for vindication was closed.

After the World war Chamberlain spent two years in Washington in an attempt to gain reversal of the court-martial decision. From there he went to Baltimore to an insurance company and continued to push his claim. Later he became manager of the First Trust Joint Stock Land company in Dallas; he is now vice president of a large investment firm there.

Fine Fails to Silence

Customary "Thank You"

Montclair, N. J.—The incarceration of politeness arrived in Montclair the other day, but the extreme courtesy of the individual cost him $10 in police court.

Stopped by Patrolman Johnson for driving without lights, Peter Kramer of Newark was given a ticket for appearance in court.

"Thank you," he said.

He was arraigned a few hours later before Recorder Strazza. Patrolman Johnson expressed opinion that Kramer might have been just a little bit sarcastic in his retort after being handed the ticket, so the magistrate asked him for an explanation.

"Well," Kramer said, "I always thank anyone when something is given to me."

"Well," echoed the recorder, "I'll give you a $10 fine."

"Thank you," said Kramer.

Jail, Fine Girl for Antics on Peace Span

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Peace bridge, an international span running from Buffalo to Fort Erie, Ontario, is no place to disturb the peace, Miss Eleanor Seymour, twenty-two, learned in city court here. She was fined $100, sentenced to ten days in jail and her license was revoked for her escapade at the American end of the structure.

According to customs officials, Miss Seymour drove up to the customs office driving her car while under the influence of liquor and clad in male garments, and it was only after three customs men and two policemen banded together that it was possible to oust her from the car. Incidentally, the court was informed, the miss let go a few well-directed blows that found their marks on one policeman's head and also one which knocked off his hat.

London 'ets Used to Match Owner's Attire

London.—The craze for pets to match apparel has resulted in a new business here.

It is now possible to walk into a dog fancier's store in the west end of London, and hire a dog to match the particular dress or suit you are wearing.

Dogs are already being booked to match black and white dogs to go with the magpie two-piece costumes that are being designed for Ascot, while at present the brindle-colored dogs, that go so well with country clothes, are finding themselves most popular.

Some of the temporary owners even go a step further and take the dogs to dress shows where they match patterns against their coats.

Hippo, 75 Years Old, Eats Heartily and Dies

New York.—Mrs. Murphy, dowager hippopotamus of the United States, is dead at the Central park zoo. She was seventy-five years old—the first hippo to be brought to this country.

"The old lady has been feeble and ailing all winter," said Keeper Harry Kinney. "Her teeth were all worn down and her hay had to be chopped for her. But she kept her appetite to the last. Only the other day she ate 60 pounds of chopped hay, 30 quarts of mash made of bran, rolled oats, three or four vegetables, and several loaves of bread. Then she drank about half her tank."

Mouseland Caruso Sings Last Song

Norfolk, Neb.—"Caruso" is dead. "Caruso" of the golden voice. "Caruso" the singing mouse, who performed for countless numbers of persons, expired while sleeping in his cage.

"Caruso," the sonneteer of mouseland, was owned by a Norfolk woman. Ever since his capture last fall he has been noted for his musical ability. And, singing so much before countless admirers, he acquired the talent and temperament of an artist. Usually he sang without being coaxed; sang apparently because he loved to. When in this mood he sat up and kept time with a paw by swaying his body. At times, however, no amount of coaxing would tempt him to show-off and he would sink back in a corner of his cage.

But now, his earthly joys are over, and he probably is singing for his own kind in a mouse heaven.

FOR THE GOOSE—

THEY say love is blind. But it's a regular Argus next to hate.

If you don't respect a man's character, don't put too much stock in anything he says. You wouldn't believe everything you saw in a mirror you knew was flawed?

You can tell a lot about the character of a woman by the way she handles her moustache. Even the fact that she uses one at all, shows some'n'.

There's only three things that matters in this world—understandin', a light heart, and a great love. And if you find the last, you don't have to look for the other two.

FOR THE GANDER—

The greatest kick ain't to be born rich—or in a good family or even healthy; it's to be born the son of a mother that knows how to laugh.

The stronger a man is, the less he takes advantage of women. And the weaker a woman is, the more she takes advantage of men.

Find a woman that would rather have a tender look from you than a diamond ring and then give her both.

Prickly heat itches just as much under a silk shirt with a monogram on the sleeve.

There's some'n' interestin' happenin' all the time, only we get bored to death if it ain't happenin' to us. (Copyright.)

FLAG DAY

Flag day, June 14, is the anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes by the Continental congress in 1777.

The celebration of June 14 as Flag day has been quite generally observed in the United States ever since 1889. In that year George Bolch, a New York teacher, commemorated the birth of the flag with special patriotic exercises by his kindergarten pupils. Patriotic societies took up the observance and Flag day became well established. (Copyright.)

GARB DOESN'T MAKE THE MAN IN RUSSIA

Sheer Necessity Forces Outlawry of Style.

Moscow.—In the Soviet capital, at least, clothes do not make the man; nor the woman, for that matter. Style is among the antiquated "bourgeois" notions thrown into discard by the Bolshevik revolution.

Sheer necessity—the lack of textiles and of cash—had more to do with outlawing style than did Communist principles. In the bitter years of civil strife and famine people were happy enough to have their bodies covered without bothering about the cut or color of the covering. While conditions are incomparably better, those who can afford to worry about the hang of their trousers or their skirts are still a small minority.

Many men, of course, threw off the yoke of a tailored jacket for the freedom of a peasant blouse out of revolutionary ardor; but the overwhelming majority did so because their jackets had fallen to pieces and they could not buy a new one.

The Russian Flapper. A generation of Russian girls adopted rough boyish attire and scoffed at female finery. One may be pardoned for guessing, however, that many of them were making a virtue of necessity. Certainly the first sign of easier economic conditions here, as in the rest of the world, was the better-dressed young woman. The Russian "dapper"—a boy's cap pulled rakishly over her close-cropped head and a man's overcoat over her nondescript dress—is definitely on the decline.

Between poverty and principle, however, style has fared badly enough. Anything but stark nakedness (and the rigors of Russian climate discourage that) passes muster. Moscow undoubtedly holds the world record for diversity of costume. The queerest sartorial combinations will attract not the slightest attention on Moscow streets. The most grotesque patch-work passes unnoticed.

Can't Judge by Clothes. Another result of the discarding of style is that one can no longer judge anyone's social status from his or her clothes. The fellow you bump into on the stairway may be the commissar or the humblest of his clerks—you can't tell from his apparel. Indeed, if he shows a tendency towards elegant European dress he is most likely to be the clerk.

Foreigners who have visited Moscow over a period of years agree that in general people here are enormously better dressed than a few years ago, although the standard is still far below western Europe, or even a city like Warsaw. Smartly dressed women are more in evidence and the popularity of "Modes," a pitiful little magazine devoted to the Paris fashions, may be a sign of the times.

Fruit Growers Profit From Europe's Winter

Lindsay, Calif.—The "It's an ill wind—" adage was borne out literally in Europe this year, with California orange growers reaping the benefit of the suffering of European growers.

The most severe European winter in 230 years caused great damage to the Spanish citrus crop, next largest in the world to that of California.

One result was that the California Fruit Growers' exchange has already moved its first shipment of oranges to Europe, docking in London the latter part of April. Others are being loaded, and before the season ends it is estimated California citrus growers will have benefited to the extent of marketing 2,500 carloads of their product that never would have been able to compete with European growers under ordinary circumstances.

The extra market proved extremely fortuitous to California growers, burdened with an unusually large Valencia crop. It is estimated more than 1,000,000 boxes of oranges will go to Europe this season at prices that will net the grower from $2 to $4 a box.

New Hampshire Man Has Wagon 113 Years Old

Franklin, N. H.—Frank H. Gelsdorf says he owns a wagon one hundred and thirteen years old and in perfect running condition. It has original tires and paint, he says, and he has absolute proof as to its age.

It is said to be one of the very first wagons that Abbott Downing, the famous builder of the Concord coach constructed. It has no springs similar to the leaf springs in use on wagons and automobiles today, but is nevertheless rides like a cradle. In place of springs there are leather straps running from the front to the rear axle and the body of the wagon is suspended upon these similar to the manner in which the stage coaches were constructed.

At the places on the leather where the front wheels hit when the wagon is turned there is a protection in the shape of steel plates to prevent the tires from wearing out the leather.

Variety Keynote of New Wardrobe

Broken Lines, Ways of Cutting, Combinations of Colors, Features.

Departing from the straight and narrow way has its advantages in fashion, and that is what clothes have done, with the result that the straight line dress or coat rarely is seen. Lines are broken, written a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune, by intricate ways of cutting clothes and by the combinations of colors used, and through trimmings.

In suits coats may be of a color that contrasts with the skirts. No pretense is made of having them bear any relation to each other in hue. For instance a dark brown jacket may be worn with a rose colored skirt or a bright blue one with a red skirt. Somewhat extreme, these two combinations, but there are many others showing more restraint.

Diversity of styles makes the assembling of a new wardrobe interesting and at the same time economical, offering as it does opportunity to combine the old with the new. To add a blouse in one of the new tones to a suit one already has, in some measure makes it a new costume. A summer frock is metamorphosed by the addition of an unlined jacket of chiffon or crepe. Any of the lingerie neckpieces such as berthas or cuffs, offer unlimited opportunity to develop diversity in dress.

Tuck-in Blouse Is Revived.
An interesting model suggestive of the importance of the blouse as a means of changing the feeling of a costume is in evidence. With a jumper, or one of the old-fashioned tuck-in blouses, another revival, it may be worn in the morning, while a frilled lingerie blouse makes it suitable for the afternoon. In buying blouses it is well to bear in mind the importance of the soft satins in pinkish, white tones, the shade known as egg-shell, or very pale beige. Among the newest blouses are those having square neck openings, side buttoned closing and linked cuffs. These cuffs necessitate the use of the old-time cuff links. Small, flat metal buttons make the smartest links.

Flowered chiffon capes and coats, to wear over one's evening frocks, are attractive additions to the wardrobe. Over a very simple white crepe, satin frock a three-quarter length black and white flowered chiffon cape may be worn. An effective way to have it made is with the upper part fitting the shoulders like a deep yoke, and from there a succession of flounces falling to the bottom of the wrap, which should be cut considerably longer in the back than in the front. A three-quarter length chiffon coat with a petal ruff collar at the neck is a charming way to enliven an evening costume which, while still perfectly good, has lost interest for the wearer.

Net gowns covered with sequin embroidery will be very smart for this summer. Chanel showed them at her opening in black, in bright red, and in green and blue tones. These are quite different from the pallid tones of last year. A jumper top seems extraordinary for ceremonious occasions, but she displayed one in green for a wedding event. On another is the cardigan jacket of net, also pallid. The dress consists of a jumper bodice and gathered skirt.

Untrimmed Dress Is Fashion.
Woman's simple untrimmed dress has passed. Now elaborate workmanship is essential.

All sorts of artistic designs are formed on suits, wraps and dresses by means of tucking. There are flowers, leaves, fans and seaweed, indeed almost any design of which the fancy of dressmakers conceive. Tuckings and appliques in points and slanted effect are perhaps the outstanding. Stitched cut-out sections on the skirt or suit may represent fan effect. These are pointed up or pointed down. A seaweed design may frame circular gowns on skirts or gowns away from a plaited hem.

Lightweight wool crepe frocks, which are so important in this season's wardrobe, have their straight bodice ornamented with attached sections. Other wool gowns are entirely plaited at their skirt part, some under a big yoke curved up on one side or pointed up in front. Others are gathered at the waist and skirt.

are cut out and assembled to form moral borders at the neck and openings, the hem and the cuffs.

Larger Hat, Lower Crown.

Hats for the season may be small or of medium size, but there is a decided tendency toward the larger hat with a lower crown. The older woman always is glad to have a hat that throws a becoming shadow on her face. In hat fabrics felts, satins, straws and ribbons are equally good. Straws of this year, however, are very much like fabrics. Most of them are as light and soft as thistle-down. Milliners in designing hats use them just as they would felts. The smartest hats for young women are very short in front to show the forehead. The carefully shaped eyebrow must be seen. Some of the most attractive ones are long either on the side or back. Turbans may have ruffles across the back, or if of straw may be trimmed with rows of straw curls. Models such as these are especially adapted for the woman who is permitting her hair to grow.

With street clothes the very simplest gloves always are in good taste. They may be of white or yellow chamolite. Yellow gloves are very smart at the moment. For the morning gloves should be heavy and washable and of the gauntlet type. For afternoon wear nothing is better than white or beige kid or doekin cut on the same lines.

With the ensemble or the three-piece suit, if it is not fur trimmed, and very often it is not, we will wear a gay scarf, figured perhaps if the ensemble be of plain material, and in patchwork effect if it is not. The flattering for scarf which has become almost a necessity of late years may be composed of one or two skins. The mode in which the perfectly dressed woman wears this scarf is most important. The fashion of wearing the single skin loosely over the shoulder and hanging down the back has departed. This season the scarf should be worn around the neck with both head and tail to the front.

Shoes very from the tailored Oxford worn with the sports suit to the intricately cut strap slipper with high heel, which so many women who carefully consider their toilette prefer for afternoon. Colored leathers, used either for the shoe itself or for the trimming, are much in evidence, so if you like colored shoes your footwear may match your ensemble. If you prefer the beige tones of the natural lizard or snake your pumps may be trimmed with a color to harmonize with your costume.

Separate Jacket Smart for Spring and Summer

The separate jacket is the thing: Whether of velvet, self-collared or trimmed with fur, or of chiffon, it is a member of the smart spring and summer wardrobe.

Capes also accompany some of the lace frocks or those of chiffon which are combined with lace. They are often finished with long scarf collars. Both cape and jacket allow the formal frock to make a more informal appearance than its sleeveless model would indicate.

Midshipman Chapple has passed the hand-over-hand rope-climbing test, and therefore is allowed to represent the Academy as a heavyweight boxer, a role for which he is admirably fitted. And the news draws attention to this feat of fitness, says the Baltimore Sun. The heavy athlete with mighty muscles does not win out ahead of the little fellow by mere size, for he has, say, 135 pounds to lift as against the 140 of the other. And one can imagine how general is the wish that this practice could be extended to other fields—if, for example, the classroom examinations might be adjusted to the mental weight of the students.

A romantic friend of mine has been cured of romance, or so he tells me. This was the way, says a writer in the Baltimore Sun. Last spring when wild violets were in bloom, he gathered a sack full of them, drove home with them in his car, spread them out over the couch in his living room, and lay down on them for a nap. He had nightmare and twisted and turned, and when he woke up the violets were mashed and squeezed out and smelt like a yeast vat.

Opportunity for All

Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.—Shakespeare.

All can agree with Doctor Butler when he says that the public mind needs a constant spur to self-examination and self-criticism, says the Buffalo News. That is the surest way to correction. Any one can stand off and criticize the other fellow from New Year's day to the next Merry Christmas without accomplishing much more than to make a bit of noise in the world. The individual who can sit down and criticize himself is the one who is going to make the world just a little better in his own person, at least. If that one person can be multiplied by 100,000 the result is going to be a progressively better nation.

Kind Somewhere

A man who has a mind too big for his needs is one who sits on the courthouse steps and discusses the situation in Europe when the flour barrel at home is empty.—Exchange.

Surgeons have transplanted the corner of a good eye to one that was injured by a cataract, the spare part being furnished by a man who had to lose it on account of a tumor. If successful, it will be almost a miracle of surgery, but not much more remarkable than the luck of the patient in finding an old eye in the hospital when he needed it. Men have had worse luck than that with buttons. Surgery has about reached the point where hospitals will have to establish a joint stockroom where orders for slightly used organs can be filled.

"The radio will make all Americans talk alike within 25 years." The North Dakota legislature has just passed a bill to make American instead of English the official language, and down in New Mexico a move to dispense with the reading of the Journal in Spanish has been defeated by the house of representatives.

The Toughest Material

Even if the new hard metal, carbide, known as "Cobalt" or "Stellite" is by some means, does not measure in actual use to be quite so resistant to wear as the new material, it already provides opportunity for a breakthrough into the microscopic world of machine interiors, says the New York Herald-Tribune. The new material consists of tiny crystals of tungsten carbide, one of the hardest chemical compounds known, embedded in and intimately attached to a matrix of metallic cobalt. Cobalt is not by itself a particularly hard metal, but it can be made unusually tough. With the tiny grains of crystalline carbide scattered through its substance, the reinforced cobalt adds a cutting edge to its toughness and even becomes able, tests have shown, to cut a screw thread on a rod of porcelain or of glass. Thus comes to its latest step, although doubtless not its last one, a process of invention and discovery which began at least with the first bronze.

Oldest Battery in Pro Baseball

Doc Crandall, pitcher, and Hank Severid, who are thought to be the oldest battery in professional baseball today. The two men have not played together since 1910, when they were both with the St. Louis Browns. After many ups and downs, drifting from one team to another, the men have reunited again on the Sacramento club.

Is Fastest Human

Charles Borah, captain of the Southern California track and field team, who has been dubbed the "fastest human."

Big Jim McCormack Was Early at Record Marks

One of the early record makers was "Big Jim" McCormack. He had a "submarine" delivery like that of Carl Mays although it was known as an underhand delivery in those days. He pitched for Chicago in 1885 and 1886. In 1885 he had a run of 14 consecutive victories and in 1886 he won the opening game and did not lose one until July, scoring 16 straight. Before joining Chicago he pitched for the Cincinnati Reds and he won 14 in a row for them in 1884.

Amos Rusie, one of the very best pitchers of all time, was never able to win more than 14 in a row. Rusie had this string in 1894. Ed Reulbach, who helped Chicago beat Detroit for the world's championship, won 14 in a row in 1909, the year that Pittsburgh took the pennant from Chicago after the Cubs had beaten the Tigers in the world series of 1908.

The best record in either league since 1912 was made by "Daisy" Vance of Brooklyn. Vance won 15 games consecutively in 1924. Consecutive victories are harder to achieve each season, it appears. The pitcher who breaks the present record will have to have a great amount of luck besides considerable pitching skill.

Several Homers Set Big League Records

There have been several instances in the big leagues in which a team made two home runs, each with the bases loaded, but in no instance did both of these circuit smashes come in one inning.

Major league games in which two base-unloading homers were made, follow:

Philadelphia Athletics vs. Boston, July 8, 1902. (Daniel J. Murphy, third inning, and Harry D. Davis, sixth inning.)

Philadelphia Nationals vs. Boston, April 23, 1921. (R. Miller, first inning, and Lee Meadows, eighth inning.)

New York Giants vs. Philadelphia, September 15, 1924. (George Kelly, first inning, and Travis Jackson, third inning.)

Pittsburgh Pirates vs. St. Louis, June 22, 1925. (Hansen S. Cuyler, first inning; Harold F. Traynor, eighth inning.)

DIAMOND PICK-UPS

The split season has been abolished this year by the Texas league.

If the Giants and Yanks both win this year it will produce the fourth all-New York world's series.

Over the fifty-year mark, Sam Crawford, old Tiger outfielder, is still hitting the ball on the Pacific coast.

Ohio State and West Virginia have been baseball rivals since 1894. Ohio played two games at Morgantown this year.

The St. Paul club of the American association announces the purchase of Al Shealy, pitcher, from the New York Yankees.

Scott Hornsby, catcher of Washington university, is no relation to the Cub who is being walked by opposing pitchers.

Probably the oldest of all "first-ball" throwers on opening day was Fire Chief Wallace of Cleveland, age eighty-one.

Andy Rush, pitcher, who was sent on option to the Allentown club of the Eastern league, has been recalled by the Bridgeport team.

Bill Bradley, Cy Young, Terry Turner, Elmer Flick and Paddy Livingston were among old-time baseballers in celebration at Cleveland.

Manager Mike McNally says Pete Latzo, the former welterweight champion, will play third base with his Binghamton club this summer.

Leon Riley, who pitched for Norfolk in the Virginia State league last season, has been signed by the Reading Keys of the International league.

Hugh McQuillan, pitcher, formerly of the New York Giants, Boston Braves and Newark Internationals, has been signed by the Toledo club.

The Nashville club of the Southern association has asked for waivers on Johnny Brock, veteran catcher. Brock went to Nashville from the Atlanta club.

Melvin Ott, youthful slugger of the New York Giants, says that Bureleigh Grimes of the Pittsburgh Pirates is the hardest pitcher in the league for him to hit.

About all there is left for Cincinnati fans is the effort of their boys to set a new world's record for double plays. They had a record last year of over 190.

Gordon Kessler, football and baseball star at Maryland, was elected president of his class as a freshman and has been re-elected each year that followed.

Most of the long names are shortened when the big leagues get them, but Dick Porter's name was lengthened to Richard Twilley Porter on his arrival in Cleveland.

Old-timers who remember Kid Eberfeld will be surprised to learn that at the opening game of the Southern association at Chattanooga, Tenn., he entered the park arm in arm with an umpire.

Horace Lisenbee, pitcher, and Heale Wagner, coach, both with the Boston Red Sox, were born on the same day of the year, September 23. Wagner was born in 1881 and Lisenbee in 1893.

The chief of the federal bureau of public roads reports that during the last eight years the country has spent an average of one and a half billions annually for new roads. This is in addition, we would remind the pessimists, to the chewing gum bill.

A tiresome type in the old times was the one who used to say, "Hello, Chester, I'm glad to see you back. You're away ahead of time," and suit the action to the word by slapping you on the chest, back and head, respectively.

The internal revenue bureau rules that entertainment of newspaper reporters by screen stars is not a necessary expense and therefore cannot be deducted in income tax returns. But they don't know the reporters!

The girl who invented the "I saw down and go boom" thing also ad vertises herself in theater papers as "the world's champion comedienne." All this, no doubt, signifies a sense of humor.
